

City Has Spent over $70,000 On the Voting Rights Issues

by Bay Woods

The Greenbelt City Council held the last of three public meetings on its recommendations involving the city’s municipal election laws which the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) last year claimed violated Section 2 of the 1965 Voting Rights Act (VRA). About a dozen people attended the February 25 meeting at the Springhill Lake Recreation Center.

Though the city’s presentation was largely handled by their legal representative, Stephen Sylvestri, City Manager Michael McLaughlin revealed that the city had already spent $70,692 – or enough to pay seven additional councilmembers – on legal representation regarding the issue raised last February by the NAACP and the ACLU.

Council has recommended that the city move the date of municipal elections to even years so they will coincide with national and state elections, thereby increasing turnout. During his presentation Sylvestri revealed the rationale behind this change.

He said the criterion for a Section 2 Violation of the VRA involves “looking to determine whether African Americans who are voting are getting their candidate elected.” According to Sylvestri, low turnout among a specific racial or ethnic demographic does not meet the threshold for a violation.

Sylvestri said the “question is, are we in violation of law? And the answer is, we are not in violation of law. We are not in violation of the Voting Rights Act (VRA) . . . but there is something the matter. If we don’t take action, we might be.”

Sylvestri went on to explain: “There is no evidence that people in the largely African American precincts are not having candidates elected.” But the problem is, Sylvestri said, “turnout is very low.” This is a problem, in part, because it provides sample sizes too small to determine whether “when African Americans vote, they are electing the leaders of their choice.”

According to Sylvestri, the proposed alignment with state and national elections will not fix any problems regarding the VRA but it will increase the turnout of African American voters and thereby let the city, the Department of Justice and interest groups see whether or not minority voters are able to elect the candidates of their choice.

“With better turnout we can tell for sure whether African American voters are electing candidates of their choice,” Sylvestri said. “We can’t just stand on low voter turnout. We’ve got to do something about it.”

Opposed Districts

Sylvestri dismissed districts as radical, saying they would “divide the city racially.” He then engaged in a lengthy critique of Choice Voting, whose greatest advocate, FairVote (based in Takoma Park), was represented in the audience by Amy Ngai.

First, Sylvestri pointed out problems with the document provided by FairVote at a previous meeting. He claimed that the data referred almost exclusively to single winner systems and does not apply to multiple winner elections such as that for the Greenbelt City Council.

Choice Voting, though advocated by some, has been called confusing at every meeting regarding the election system. As Sylvestri said, “I don’t see the

by Bay Woods

Deborah Jeon, the legal representative of the Prince George’s County chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) and author of last February’s letter which began the city’s investigation into its municipal election system, declared in an interview on Tuesday that “It is wonderful the city recommended this change.”

Jeon and the ACLU worked with the Prince George’s County Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and FairVote in investigating Greenbelt’s municipal election system. Mel Franklin, an assistant Attorney General and president of the Greater Marlboro Democratic Club, originally brought concerns to the NAACP about the lack of minority representation on the Greenbelt City Council. He also spoke with representatives of the Department of Justice, who subsequently undertook an ongoing investigation of Greenbelt.

After an initial inquiry, Jeon wrote a letter on behalf of her organization and the NAACP, claiming that Greenbelt’s all-white city council may be in violation of the 1965 Voting Rights Act. After receiving the letter last February 29, the Greenbelt City Council held a series of hearings on the issue.

After a long process that has cost the city more than $70,000, council has recommended that municipal elections be moved to even numbered years so they coincide with state and national elections where turnout in the largely African American precincts (8 and 13) is considerably higher.

June White Dillard, of the County’s NAACP said that “we are happy about the change. We are all in agreement that this is a good first step. But the NAACP still feels that five districts would be a better solution.”

Date Change

Jeon said she was aware that “some think that they should do more but I think this is great.” She continued, “We spent a lot of time after the letter and as I did more research and we went through the hearings I became increasingly enthusiastic about the date change as a way to diversify the electorate.”

She concurred with the city’s legal counsel, Stephen Sylvestri, that the low turnout in those precincts made it difficult to “evaluate returns to see if [the problem] was the structure [of elections.]”

Dillard repeated that the change is a good first step but she said, “We won’t really be able to see how well it works until 2010.”

Jeon said she believes that the proposed date-change “has the potential to improve the participation of many people.” She said that such a change could “increase participation and diversify the electorate and that will be sufficient.”

Dillard said she expects to have a conference call with the ACLU, the NAACP and FairVote next week to discuss further steps that the groups may take.

Delegates’ Bill Would Fund Co-op Store’s Renovation

by Barbara Hopkins

In addition to governing the city, the Greenbelt City Council also takes a stand when appropriate on behalf of its constituency to support or not support various county and state legislative bills that may impact life in Greenbelt. At council’s most recent regular meeting on February 23, its members discussed several bills now before the state legislature.

Co-op Renovation

Delegates Tawanna Gaines, Anne Healey and Justin Ross are jointly sponsoring HB 968 creating state debt to provide a grant to the Board of Directors of the Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative for renovating the Co-op grocery store in Roosevelt Center. The grant would be in an amount equal to the lesser of $250,000 or the amount of matching funds provided by the Greenbelt Co-op. The Co-op board would have until June 1, 2011, to show evidence of such matching funds.

Greenbelt Co-op President Dorrie Bates told council they plan to renovate 17,000 square feet, putting in new freezers, refrigerators, shelves and perhaps a new roof. “The economy keeps changing,” she said and therefore so do their plans, “and they aren’t getting bigger.”

She added that the management staff are under no illusions they can get everything they’d like to have, but “only hopeful.” Bates said because some of their freezers are 29 years old, updating will improve energy efficiency. Council voted unanimously to support the bill.

Greenhouse Gas

The Greenhouse Gas Emission Reduction Act of 2009 (SB273, cross filed with HB315), with Senator Paul Pinsky as its lead sponsor, modifies existing law to require the State of Maryland to

Greenbelt Considers Joining Earth Hour 2009 Effort

by Barbara Hopkins

It may be a little darker in Greenbelt between 8:30 and 9:30 p.m. on Saturday, March 28. Greenbelt Councilmember Leta Mach has suggested that the city participate in Earth Hour 2009, a program begun in Sydney, Australia two years ago to send a global message that people can take action on climate change.

At their regular meeting on February 23 the city council agreed to refer her suggestion to GreenACES, Greenbelt’s Advisory Committee on Environmental Sustainability, asking that they report back to council by their first meeting in March with ideas on how to participate, from a proclamation encouraging people to join in to a more involved program.

For one hour on this one night of the year, people are encouraged to turn off nonessential lights to address climate change. Electric use accounts for 42 percent of human-induced climate changing factors. Street lights and others deemed necessary will remain on.

One year after its inception, Earth Hour involved more than 50 million people in 35 countries across 18 time zones. In 2009 this global sustainability movement hopes to reach one billion people in 1,000 cities worldwide. So far over 64 countries or territories are participating. People can register at www.earthhour.org to join.

Greenbelt citizen Doug Love addressed the council, saying he has participated before and believes the program has great symbolic and practical effect. He suggested that if the lights could be cut that night, people would have a better chance of seeing the moons of Saturn and other interesting events in the sky. Councilmember Rodney Roberts said he would gladly support cutting the glaring lights on the side of the Public Works building.

US 1/MD 201 Study Deferred

In a February 9 letter to the Greenbelt City Council, Maryland State Highway Administrator Neil J. Pedersen advised that the US1/MD 201 Project Planning Study has been deferred until further notice as a result of the economic downturn. The letter was in response to the Greenbelt City Council’s letter expressing concerns about the highway improvements proposed. Pedersen said the city’s views would be given due consideration if funding for the project should again become available.

THANKS!

On the cold evening of Monday, February 23 more than 40 warm-hearted people joined us at the New Deal Café in Greenbelt for a gathering dedicated to the seven imprisoned members of the Bahá'í Faith in Iran whose lives are in danger because of their beliefs. The support and prayers offered by these people of goodwill – including several community religious leaders – are greatly appreciated by the Bahá'í Community of Greenbelt which organized this meeting. Similar prayer gatherings are being held around the world in support of the Bahá'ís of Iran.

As Martin Luther King, Jr. said, “Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere.”

To get up-to-date information on this matter, you can check <http://iran.bahai.us/>. To make your voice heard please ask Representative Steny Hoyer through www.house.gov to support House Resolution 175. Ask Senators Mikulski and Cardin through www.senate.gov to co-sponsor a bill in the Senate decrying the current treatment of Bahá'ís in Iran.

THANKS!

I would like to thank everyone who has come to my aid following my recent fall and subsequent hip replacement. I am now recuperating at home.

Everyone has been so helpful to my wife and me even by doing little things like running errands, shoveling snow or picking something up while they go to the store. I especially want to say thank you to Robin Pitts – who not only takes care of my piano but brought over a pot of delicious soup to take care of me. I brag about Greenbelt to everyone I know and people like these are why I do.

Electricity Markets Are Not Working

Two weeks ago I read a letter in the Sunday Washington Post entitled “Electricity Markets are Working Fine.” I could not agree more. They are working fine but, unfortunately, only for the electricity companies not for consumers. The anticipated advantages of deregulation (especially in the competition realm) have not been realized. The initial results for the consumer were good but, over time, once the restraining regulatory hand was removed, the consumer fared badly.

I rummaged through my records and discovered the following startling statistic: In 2004, as a conservative user of electricity (in an all-electric townhouse), I consumed 3,980 KWH. Counting all costs, I paid $184.81 for that privilege. However in 2008, using almost the same amount (4,000 KWH), I paid $661.79, more than three and one-half times the amount per KWH over my cost in 2004.

It’s clear that the heavily-promoted promises of deregulation have not borne fruit. There is effectively no competition. One faces a basically monopoly market for a crucial, essential commodity with no place to go except your local electric utility.

I say bring back sensible regulation.

Esther Webb

Esther Smith Webb died in her Greenbelt home of over 50 years on February 27, 2009. She moved once from 3-B to 7-F Crescent Road. She was an inspiration for many, activist and ordinary citizens alike.

Her training in lifelong work for peace and social justice began in a setting of poverty in Port Gibson, Miss., on Nov. 30, 1917. Her gentle father, Emory Smith, and Annette Gourley left the land too wet to farm and headed to Baton Rouge, La., where Esther was touched by the impact of racism, social isolation and freethinkers in the local United Methodist Church.

Her sister, Gwen Patterson, was nine years younger and able to graduate from medical school as a physician. Esther pursued her interests in medicine by being a subject in numerous clinical trials. She finally went to medical school with the donation of her body to Georgetown University.

She graduated at 16 as class valedictorian and began her college education at LSU, Antioch, University of Chicago and Catholic University. At Antioch she was lured into Quakerism by tasty potlucks and a theology that reinforced her notions of a divine presence in nature and faith in people to individually and collectively do the right thing. She remained active in the Society of Friends, finding her husband John Webb at another potluck and raising her children John, Bill, Walter and Cathy under the influence of Quakerism.

Her commitment to pacifism was rooted in the tragedy of Pearl Harbor where she witnessed her loving engaged international community of students get shut down overnight by attitudes of suspicion, anger and hatred. She thought the mindset of war also harmed the community by taking money better spent on upgrading schools, providing housing and health care and protecting the environment. She proceeded to create numerous community peace groups including: the Greenbelt Peace Committee, Greenbelt Committee Against the War in Vietnam, PG County Peace and Justice Coalition, MD United for Peace and Justice, Sane Freeze and the Grey Panthers. She also fastidiously supported the Greenbelt Consumer Cooperative and its ideals at board meetings, the 1950s nursery school and the PTA while her children were school aged.

Esther worked 20 years in the DC public schools graduating from teacher, guidance counselor, to school psychologist. She sought to empower her students to maximize their potential by procuring college scholarships to free them from poverty.

She felt her greatest quiet accomplishment was in submitting a minority report that was instrumental in eliminating the practice of training DC school age boys for the military, the DC Junior Cadet Corps. She also worked untiringly to end military conscription in the USA.

In her retirement Esther heightened her activism to include civil disobedience where she proudly was arrested three times. She boasted that she was treated with extra kindness because she was a grandma, even by the police. Her generosity to strangers in need was a challenge to her family, as she repeatedly opened her home to folks needing shelter for a night, a week or years.

Esther's life was a statement of faith, perseverance, optimism and faith in people to work out their problems when given a little help. And optimism that a better world could be created by the persistent work and vision of ordinary people like ourselves.

Interested friends are invited to Esther's memorial ser-

Ronald W. Sweeney

Ronald W. Sweeney of Lakewood died on Friday, February 27, 2009. A native Washingtonian, he was born July 9, 1926. He served in the U.S. Marine Corps during World War II and shortly after returning from the service married his high-school sweetheart Patricia. They were married for over 60 years.

The family moved to the Lakewood section of Greenbelt in 1959, one of the original families in the new development. They raised their four children there.

Mr. Sweeney was employed by the National Security Agency as a facilities specialist, retiring after 21 years. He was a longtime member of Greenbelt American Legion Post 136.

He was a fan of all sports, especially the Washington Redskins, and in Greenbelt enjoyed working in his home garden, a showplace in his neighborhood. He also did woodworking and loved fishing in Bethany Beach, Chincoteague and, later on, at Casey Key on the Gulf side of Florida where the family spent part of every year.

Mr. Sweeney is survived by his wife Patricia A. Sweeney; daughters Susan C. (Terrence) Justin, Barbara K. (Joseph E.) Costello, Joanne P. (George) Aulizio; son Michael W. Sweeney; grandchildren Kimberly Rosoff, Eric and Brian Justin and Gregory Aulizio; and great-grandchildren Havanna Nunez, Asher Rosoff and Aubrey Justin.

A memorial service was held on Tuesday, March 3 at Borgwardt Funeral Home in Beltsville with Rev. Jack Fitzgerald officiating, preceded by American Legion services.

Contributions may be made in his memory to the Arthritis Foundation, Metropolitan Washington Chapter, 4455 Connecticut Ave., NW, Suite 300, Washington, DC 20008-2302 or to the charity of one's choice.

We were sorry to hear of the death of longtime Greenbelter and peace activist Esther Webb, 91, who died on February 27, 2009.

Condolences also to the family and friends of Ron Sweeney, an original Lakewood resident, who died February 27, 2009.

Good luck, best wishes and stay sharp to the student teams from ERHS, Greenbelt Elementary, and Goddard French Immersion, who will participate in the Destination ImagiNation regional tournament to be held Saturday at Charles Herbert Flowers High School in Springdale. The top two teams Saturday will advance to the state level competition.

Congratulations to:

- Air Force Airman First Class Andre T. Thomas, the son of Cassandra Turner of Hanover Parkway, who has graduated from basic training at Lackland AFB, San Antonio.
- Greenbelters Mike and CJ Evans and son Connor, who welcomed a new baby to their family. Second son Jacob Warren Evans was born at home on Hillside Road on February 25, 2009, and weighed in at 11 lbs., 2 oz.

Happy Birthday to Florence Holly, who celebrated her 100th birthday on March 4!

Sylvestri went on to challenge the evidence provided by FairVote, who used California elections as examples. FairVote cites an increase in turnout in the 2005 California elections as proof that Choice Voting increases turnout.

Sylvestri pointed out, however, that though 2005 was the first year California used Choice Voting, a number of other factors could have increased turnout. He went on to show that in 2003 there was a 54 percent turnout and that, without the other factors in the 2005 elections, the turnout dropped considerably – to only 35.6 percent in 2007.

“The turnout went down!” Sylvestri exclaimed. He then pointed out the 7.6 percent turnout in Takoma Park, FairVote’s home base, is no model to strive for. “If the key is increasing voter turnout, that’s not the right means for the ends.”

Conflict of Interest

Joan Falcão, the first speaker to address council, claimed that it is a “conflict of interest for you all to get to decide whether it will be easier for you to be reelected.” She was concerned about council’s proposed plan, arguing that “people will vote based on name recognition. In the current system they go because they care. If they don’t choose to go, we’re not trampling on their rights.”

Keith Chernikoff, who has stood as a candidate for council and worked on the city’s Board of Elections, said he “emphatically opposes districts.” He said he was “encouraged by this proposal.” Nevertheless, Chernikoff’s optimism was cautious and he raised a number of logistical challenges which “if not met will cause more harm than good.”

Che Sailes, president of the Greenbelt West Residents Association, pointed out that “we’re in Greenbelt West where a majority of African Americans live and if you look around, it is not a majority in this room.” Sailes was one of only two African Americans who attended the meeting.

“If the crux of the matter is about race, our solutions should address that, rather than turnout. Greenbelt has to be pushed. It has to realize this hasn’t been done. We are talking about a minority on council,” he said. “It is something real, not academic.”

Bill Orleans echoed William Buckley’s famous line and argued that we “might have a better city council if we pick five names from the phonebook.” Mayor Judith Davis twice asked Orleans to limit the length of his comments and make sure they remained on topic. However, to this reporter, Orleans’ comments were neither longer nor less focused than those of other speakers.

Choice Voting

Amy Ngai, who is not a resident of Greenbelt, spoke at length about Choice Voting. She said “on behalf of FairVote and the other organizations, we really appreciate all of the work you’ve done and taken a step forward.”

Ngai said that for voters, “Choice Voting is as easy as 1-2-3. Since the city wants to do more outreach it would not be hard to educate voters in a new system.”

Ngai and Sylvestri exchanged words when Ngai implicitly threatened the city in an attempt to persuade them to adopt Choice Voting. She said that the Department of Justice has gone along with Choice Voting in the past. Then she added that “in other places the Department of Justice has chosen the system and people have not liked their choice but have been stuck with it.”

Sylvestri corrected Ngai, pointing out that “courts do not say that you have to change to this” particular system. “They say you must change” and then evaluate the legality of changes that municipalities make.

The meeting concluded with Sylvestri reminding those in attendance that “no documents published by council are decisional documents.”

Davis concurred. “We have not made a decision yet,” she said.

Quilts Decorate U. S. Courthouse

The normally somber walls of the U.S. Courthouse in Greenbelt will be enlivened through April 23 with colorful and creative quilts and other fabric artwork. The display on all four floors of the courthouse atrium is an annual one sponsored by the Annapolis Quilt Guild with the assistance of the Bowie Southern Comforters, Fiberlectic and the Calvert County Quilt Guild.

The quilts are the creations of 32 Maryland quilters. The works range in size from quilts large enough for at least a queen-sized bed to small wall hangings. Some are theme pieces, such as one with an inauguration motif that has the Presidential Seal in its middle and the Presidential oath of office embroidered at the bottom. Others are more abstract, such as a Color Study in yellows, red and blue/grays or the eye-catching Kaleidoscope with a maze of interconnecting designs. Some are machine quilted but others are done by hand.

The display is available during business hours. The courthouse is located at 6500 Cherrywood Lane, off Kenilworth Avenue. There is a security check upon entering the courthouse. For details email aqgweb@annapolisquiltguild.org.

update and publish an inventory of greenhouse gas emissions for the year 2006 and reduce that amount by 25 percent by the year 2020. The bill says “it is in the best interest of the state to act early and aggressively to achieve the . . . recommended goals of reducing greenhouse gas emissions by 10 percent from 2006 levels by 2012 and by 15 percent from 2006 levels by 2015”

Among other requirements, the bill requires the state to adopt a specified plan with particular regulations and to implement programs to reduce greenhouse gas emissions. Publication of the inventory of 2006 greenhouse gas emissions would be required by June 1, 2011.

According to the Maryland General Assembly, Department of Legislative Services, hiring five new staff and contracting for the assistance needed to develop a new program to implement the bill requires an increase of $557,500 in Fiscal Year 2010 expenditures. Revenues would not be affected.

Future budgets would also be impacted with an overall net negative affect over five years projected at over $4 million.

The Greenbelt City Council voted unanimously to express support for this bill.

Forest Conservation

Also sponsored by Senator Pinsky is a bill that would implement a policy by the end of 2012 of no net loss of forests. The bill would amend the current Forest Conservation Act, which Pinsky also sponsored, to decrease the threshold of required compliance with the act from 40,000 to 20,000 square feet for proposed subdivision plans.

The bill also repeals specified exemptions from the requirements of the act for cutting or clearing trees in a public utility right-of-way. It increases fees paid in lieu of mitigation and links them to future inflation. The bill received council’s unanimous support.

Soccer Stadium

House Bill 1282, Prince George’s County Soccer Stadium, would authorize financing to acquire and construct a soccer stadium in the county. Sites near Largo and the Morgan Boulevard Metro Station have recently been under consideration, but property near the Greenbelt Metro station had at one time been considered.

The city expressed strong opposition to building the stadium in or near Greenbelt at that time and wants an amendment to this bill excluding a Greenbelt site from consideration. Councilmembers agreed to discuss such an amendment with its delegation at an upcoming legislative dinner.

Homeowners Associations

Council agreed to support a bill requiring condominium and homeowner associations to conduct independent studies of their financial reserves at least once every five years. Another bill, according to Mayor Judith Davis very much needed, improves the process of transferring control of an association from the developer to the homeowners’ board of directors.

A third, closely related bill would require cooperatives, condominiums and homeowners associations to maintain fidelity insurance to protect members “against losses resulting from acts or omissions arising from fraud, dishonesty, or criminal acts.”

Councilmember Leta Mach expressed confidence that GHI is already in compliance with each of these three laws, should they be passed. Council unanimously supported the measure.

Cable Franchises

House Bill 1182, Communication Services – Taxation and Regulation, would repeal the authority of a municipality to enter into or renew an agreement on a cable franchise that includes a franchise fee. The Maryland Municipal League, which is monitoring this bill, does not expect it to move forward this session but Councilmember Konrad Herling moved that council oppose the bill. The vote against it was unanimous.

Family Workshop at Café Leads to Spring Art Exhibit

by Barbara Simon

On Saturday, March 14 from 2 to 4 p.m. Greenbelt artist Tom Baker will lead a hands-on workshop at the New Deal Café in Roosevelt Center to accompany his exhibit at the Café, “Project: Be Journey.” This free family workshop will be appropriate for ages 6 years and older, although children under 12 should be accompanied by an adult. Teens, parents, grandparents – all are encouraged to participate. Artwork created at the workshop will be incorporated into Baker’s exhibit, “Project: Be Journey,” which will be shown at the Café during March and April.

“Project: Be Journey” was born out of the “words on the refrigerator” concept of arranging magnetic, individual works on a refrigerator surface to create personal thoughts, ideas or feelings. In “Project: Be Journey” the main addition is to create a collage background on matte board cards which will relate in some way to the single word placed on it. Thus, the word “grow” would be expressed artistically, as well as in the visible, collaged word.

For example, one person may make a collage of a plant, whereas another person could use the faces of children in their background. Conversely, another person could show survivors gathering in a war-ravaged township. The same word “grow” placed on each of these cards would elicit a very different feeling and concept to the viewer. Each person would be free to use the background and word of their choice.

When completed, the artist would have a choice to contribute their card to the project.

The workshop at the Café is the second workshop opportunity Baker has led for this project; the first took place at the Greenbelt New Year’s Eve Celebration at the Community Center. He hopes to continue a series of workshops through the year culminating in a final one at the New Year’s celebration this year. Over the course of the year, the bank of “visual-word-cards” will increase, thus making it possible to create a larger variety of combined concepts. Baker hopes to go on to a second phase of the project next year to create an animation video from the bank of cards.

By the very nature of its name, “Project: Be Journey” promises to be a creative journey in itself. The year-long process has a promising potential for community reflection and growth.

A reception for “Project: Be Journey” at the Café is planned for Sunday, April 5 from 7 to 9 p.m. “Project: Be Journey” at the New Deal Café is sponsored by the Friends of New Deal Café Arts with a supporting grant from the Greenbelt Community Foundation.

Greenbelt artist Tom Baker, shown in his studio at the Greenbelt Community Center working on his “Project: Be Journey” art project, which will be the subject of his exhibit at the New Deal Café in March/April. A workshop for the community in conjunction with his show will be held March 14 at the Café.

Symphonic Band Plays Free Concert

Dekelbourn Concert Hall of the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center will be the site of a free concert by the UM Symphonic Band on Monday, March 9 at 8 p.m. The band will premiere a new work commissioned by the Atlantic Coast Conference Band Directors Association. Roosevelt and Parkdale Highs Hold Russian Tea

by Martha Kristy

On January 23 the Eleanor Roosevelt High School cafeteria and auditorium overflowed with approximately 300 students, parents, administrators and community members who came together to celebrate Russian culture, history and language with Jillian Lehman, Russian teacher at both Eleanor Roosevelt and Parkdale High Schools.

The evening began with a large buffet of Russian food in the cafeteria, prepared by the families and friends of the students. Visitors were treated to a slideshow prepared by Sara Slaney and Caitlyn Virta, co-presidents of the ERHS Slavic Honor Society, explaining how the proceeds of the event would be donated to iOrphan, a world-wide organization that supports Russian and Ukrainian orphans and orphanages.

The audience then flowed to the auditorium where they were treated to a tour of Russian history from the Russian Revolution to the Cuban Missile Crisis. Students from Lehman’s classes were engaged in making conversation in Russian with tsars, peasants, leaders, dissidents and other historical figures. All skits were written and acted by current Russian students.

Lehman, an ERHS graduate herself, teaches Russian 1 and 2 classes at Parkdale and Russian 1-5 classes at Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Since spring 2003, Russian 5 students have been piloting an Advanced Placement exam proposed by the College Board. Russian, which is one of the most spoken languages throughout Eurasia, is offered at two high schools and one middle school in Prince George’s County.

Two Local Goddard Scientists Receive National Honors

NASA Goddard Space Flight Center is the home of many award-winning scientists and this year is no different. This month Claire L. Parkinson of Greenbelt and Neil Gehrels of Berwyn Heights received recognition of their research achievements.

Parkinson

Climatologist Claire L. Parkinson has been elected to the National Academy of Engineering for leadership in understanding sea-ice changes through satellite measurements and for leading NASA’s Earth-observing Aqua satellite mission. Parkinson is a senior scientist and Aqua Project Scientist in the Cryospheric Sciences Branch at Goddard. She has worked at Goddard since July 1978, with a research emphasis on using satellite data to examine polar sea ice and climate change. She has also developed a computer model of sea ice, done fieldwork in both the Arctic and the Antarctic, including at the North Pole itself, and is the lead author of an atlas of Arctic sea ice from satellite data and a co-author of two other sea ice atlases, plus a co-editor of two books on climate change.

Outside of her Goddard work, Parkinson has written a book on the history of science and twice has won bronze medals in swimming at the U.S. National Senior Games/the Senior Olympics. She is a member of the Council of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a Fellow of both the American Meteorological Society and Phi Beta Kappa.

Gehrels

SPIE, an international society advancing light-based research, awarded their 2009 SPIE George W. Goddard award to a NASA Goddard astrophysicist Neil Gehrels, in recognition of his pioneering contributions and leadership in opening the gamma-ray spectral window as its own astronomical discipline.

Gehrels is the Chief of the Astroparticle Physics Laboratory at Goddard. He serves as principal investigator of NASA’s Swift mission and deputy project scientist of NASA’s Fermi Gamma-ray Space Telescope satellite. Since its launch on November 20, 2004, Swift has greatly advanced astronomers’ understanding of stupendously powerful stellar explosions known as gamma-ray bursts. Fermi launched in June 2008 and has already discovered a dozen new pulsars. During the 1990s Gehrels served as the Project Scientist for the Compton Observatory, which was the second of NASA’s four Great Observatories, and pioneered observations of the gamma-ray sky. Gehrels was recently awarded the Henry Draper Medal by the National Academy of Sciences.

Gehrel’s other interests include mountaineering, music and his family. His wife Ellen Williams is a professor of physics in the surface physics group at the University of Maryland. They have two children.

City Notes

The horticulture crew cleaned and sterilized the greenhouse in preparation for starting plugs and seeds in March. They also removed and cleaned the rainwater holding tanks which capture 3,400 gallons of rainwater that is used to water the greenhouse plants.

Facilities maintenance crews assisted a contractor with installing a pole on the Greenbriar side of the Spellman Overpass for a new security camera and assisted a contractor at the Old Greenbelt Theatre making accessibility modifications.

Animal control has filled a gap with a part-time animal control officer who will work evenings and weekends. With eight years of experience at Prince George’s County Animal Control and the Washington, D.C. Humane Society, Lauren Denise will focus some of her efforts on the control of the feral cat populations.

CARES

The Greenbelt Assistance in Living Program’s Backpack to Health Campaign, in partnership with Priority Partners Health Insurance and the Capital Area Food Bank, provided a produce distribution for over 100 families at Springhill Lake Elementary School.

Community resource advocate Christal Batey attended the Capital Area Food Bank Agency Achievement Academy grant application session. Now Greenbelt can apply for a $2,000 food credit to

Dolley, James Madison Are Lecture Focus

This month’s Second Tuesday Lecture will be held on March 10 at 7:30 p.m. at Belair Mansion and brings two special people of the past for a visit to the mansion.

John and Nancy Gardner, character interpreters from Delaware, will bring James and Dolley Madison to life in the mansion parlor. Considered by many to be the “Father of the Constitution,” Madison served as the fourth president of the U.S. He wed the widow Dolley Todd in 1794. They remain two of Washington, D.C.’s most famous residents. Mrs. Madison’s experiences during the War of 1812 are legendary, making her a celebrity in her own right.

Dr. John Gardner taught history at Delaware State University for 41 years. Nancy Gardner has a particular interest in 18th century women’s history. The Gardners are members of a number of 18th century dance groups, are participants in numerous re-enacting activities and are program evaluators for the Delaware Division of the Arts. Their presentation promises to be entertaining and educational.

Belair Mansion is located at 12207 Tulip Grove Drive in Bowie.
